Hey Folks! Guess What I did this month?

I broke my foot. 🦶

It wasn't anything glamorous. I wasn't roller skating, or salsa dancing, or tripping over a puppy as I chased Chris Hemsworth down the street.

Nope!

I was carrying a bag of kitty litter to the trash. You heard me. Kitty Litter.

My foot slipped off the sole of my shoe and that was it. Broken foot.

Limping around in a big boot for the next couple of months will be fun. Especially when I have so many new designs to create. But the irony is... I've been stitching gnomes and Yeti's with the most adorable little feet!

I'm a bit jealous of the pristine toes on these guys.

Are they Mocking Me? It feels like it.

Even Cupid is giving me that smirky little sideways glance.

My boot may not be pretty, but why is he so smug? He's wearing a diaper so let's ignore his fashion sense.

At least the new Yeti design is showing that he still loves me.

See? I told you.

How do YOU show your affection???

If gifting a quirky character is YOUR love language, you're my people! ❤️ Whether you have perfect feet or not. 🦶

New & Noteworthy

- The super-popular BigFoot Gnome Sewing Pattern has been updated to include photos! If you already purchased that sewing pattern you can download the newer version at no extra charge. Just login to your account where you purchased and download again. (Etsy.com or BallyhooCreations.com)
- If you're a Downton Abby fan, have you seen the Gilded Age on HBO/Max yet? I binged watched it last week (with my foot elevated, of course) and loved it. Now I eagerly await Season 2.
- Nature and little dolls? Yes please! Check out the making of Bcorns on YouTube for a thoroughly enchanting look at how David M Bird films his little acorn and twig characters with wildlife. Try not to squeal too loud.
